advancing support for its own mission and activities, and a process to which we have systematically sought to contribute evidence from our operational experience.

These milestones have also provided over time the basis for continuous expansion of collaboration between IDLO and the UN and a growing range of UN system organizations. In so doing, we have sought to respond to the emphasis that this Committee has repeatedly placed on ensuring that international support to advance the rule of law is coherent and well-integrated in meeting the needs of member st

General Assembly against corruption to which we hope to be able to contribute relevant experience from both our research and our operational programs.

In its concluding observations, the Secretary General's report on this agenda item emphasizes the need to strengthen the engagement of the United Nations in "supporting national institutions to reinforce integrity, transparency, and accountability". It also points to the UN intention to strengthen support to member states "including in areas such as climate justice, inequality, discrimination, and the implication of new and emerging technologies..." as part of a renewed effort to adapt and enhance its capacity to
