

Written comments

jurisdiction under customary and treaty law, which can be found in many international conventions on combating international crimes. In this context, it should be stressed that Article 7, as the ILC has pointed out in its commentary, only requires states to jurisdiction by adopting the necessary national legislation but such jurisdiction unless the alleged perpetrator is present in the