SECRETARY-GENERAL OF THE UNITED NATIONS

JUDGMENT

Counsel for Applicant:

Self-represented

Counsel for Respondent:

Andreas Ruckriegel, UNFPA

Introduction

of six months. On 1 June 1999, the Applicant was informed that her contract would not be renewed beyond its expiry date, on 30 June 1999.

Facts

6. By letter dated 25 June 1999, the Applicant wrote to the Secretary-General to request review of the Administration's decision dated 1 June 1999.

7. By letters dated 22 July 1999, 28 July 1999, 9 August 1999 and 10 September 2009, the Applicant wrote to the UNFPA Chief of Personnel at Headquarters, requesting payment of indemnities for dismissal, severance pay and an award of damages.

8. On 18 November 1999, the Applicant was paid an indemnity of three months, "in accordance with the provisions of Section 10800, paragraph 2.3.4 of the [UNFPA] Personnel Manual"².

9. By letter dated 28 July 2000, the Applicant, through the assistance of a counsel, wrote to the former UN Administrative Tribunal to challenge the contested decision.

10. By letter dated 25 December 2000, the Applicant submitted, through the assistance of a counsel, a statement of appeal to the JAB in New York.

11. On 22 May 2001, the then Secretary of the JAB advised the Applicant of the requirements to file an appeal before the JAB. He also transmitted an Appeals Form for completion.

12. On 1 June 2001, the Applicant returned the Appeals Form duly completed to the JAB Secretariat.

13. By email dated 5 November 2001, the JAB Secretariat informed the Applicant that her case was time-barred. She was further advised that she could provide information as to whether there were exceptional circumstances warranting a waiver of the time limits.

14. On 20 November 2001, the Applicant contacted the then Coordinator of the Panel of Counsel (PoC) to seek legal assistance. The Coordinator replied on the same day, requesting her to select five counsel from the list of PoC and to provide complete documentation relevant to her case. By letter dated 26 November 2001, the Applicant communicated the selection she had made to the Coordinator.

15. On 11 and 30 January 2002, the Applicant contacted the Coordinator of the PoC to find out whether a counsel from the list had been assigned to her. By email dated 14 February 2002, the Coordinator of the PoC replied that she had sent the Applicant a letter concerning the appointment of a counsel from the PoC list. She further informed her that the JAB had no record of her appeal.

16. By letter dated 17 September 2002, the Applicant replied that she had never received any communication from the PoC prior to the email dated 14 February 2002. Furthermore, in a registered letter dated 23 September 2002, the Applicant stated that

“[She was] surprised and shocked [...] that the JAB had no record of her appeal as [her] lawyer ha[d] been engaged in several e-mail messages and telephone calls with [the then Secretary of the JAB]”.

17. By email dated 29 December 2003, the Coordinator of the PoC wrote to the JAB Presiding Officer, requesting her to constitute a panel, on the ground that “since the rules had changed, they were hoping that the JAB would invoke staff rule 111.2 [f] (sic)³ to find the matter receivable and review the case on the merits”. The Coordinator further stated,

³ ST/SGB/2002/1 of 1 January 2002, staff rule 111.2 (f) : “An appeal shall not be receivable unless the time limits specified in paragraph (a) above have been met or have been waived, in exceptional circumstances, by the panel constituted for the appeal.”

“[The Applicant] has been writing to us and I regret that because much of the correspondence has been in French we were not that quick to respond. The delays from when she initially filed the appeal to now, therefore, are essentially due to the volume in our office and competing demands.”

18. By email dated 10 May 2004, the JAB Presiding Officer replied to the PoC Coordinator that, though the matter was time-barred, she agreed to constitute a panel to examine the issue of the appeal’s receivability.

19. On 9 June 2004, the Respondent submitted his reply to the Applicant’s statement of appeal.

20. By memorandum dated 21 July 2004, the JAB Secretariat transmitted the Respondent’s reply to the PoC Coordinator, stating,

“You are invited to submit to this Office, within one month, your written observations on the Respondent’s reply in six duplicates [...]”.

21. By email dated 18 July 2006, the JAB Secretariat informed the PoC Coordinator, that it had not received any corresponden

24. On 25 February 2008, the former UN Administrative Tribunal acknowledged receipt of the Applicant's appeal, submitted in French. The Applicant's pleading was statutory time limits. Firstly, she argues that she sought guidance from several officers in UNFPA who never responded to her requests. She was not offered guidance on how to proceed with her appeal because she was a local staff. Furthermore, she submits that she suffered from poor health conditions between August and October 1999 as well as from January to June 2000.

30. On the merits, the Applicant submits that the decision not to renew her contract was taken on the basis of extraneous factors. She also makes claims of harassment and abuse of authority against her hierarchy.

31. Finally, the Applicant argues that the delay in the disposal of her case was primarily caused by the JAB who sat on her case for six years, from 25 December 2000 to 26 October 2006. She argues that had the JAB dealt with the case diligently, this case would not be still pending eleven years later. She also stated that she did not receive proper legal assistance from the PoC, lthsdas caecausruletheer Tde. hierarchy.

dispatched by the Applicant to recipients other than the Secretary-General. One of those communications appears to have been addressed to her national Government, the latter which clearly does not have the authority to review an administrative decision of the UN. Another was addressed to the then Chief of the Division of Personnel and Training in UNFPA which only requested payment of dismissal benefits and severance pay. Finally, the Applicant wrote to the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme, conveying the message that she had submitted an application before the former UN Administrative Tribunal. In the light of the above, the Respondent argues that the Applicant has at no time formally and clearly requested review of the contested decision in accordance with the procedural requirements set out in staff rule 111.2 (a) and recalls that the former UN Administrative Tribunal has consistently held that the request for review is a procedural requirement that must be strictly enforced (Judgments No. 1196, Maia-Sampaio (2004) and No. 878, Orfali (1998)).

35. On the issue of receivability ratione temporis, the Respondent submits that even if the Applicant's letter of 25 June 1999 was a proper request for review, the application is not receivable ratione temporis pursuant to staff rule 111.2 (a) (i) and (ii). The Respondent argues that the Applicant should have appealed the contested administrative decision within one month following receipt of the Secretary-General's answer or, if the Secretary-General did not reply, within two months from when the reply was due, the Applicant being away from Headquarters. Since the Applicant did not receive a reply within two months, the appeal before the JAB should have been submitted before or on 25 September 1999. Yet, the Applicant submitted her appeal fifteen months after the statutory time limits, on 25 December 2000.

36. On the issue whether there were exceptional circumstances warranting a waiver of the receivability requirement, the Respondent rejects the Applicant's arguments that her physical location prevented her from pursuing her case in a timely manner. The Respondent argues that, on the contrary, the Applicant did dispatch

(a) A staff member wishing to appeal an administrative decision, pursuant to staff

- i. If the Secretary-General replies to the staff member's letter, he or she may appeal against the answer within one month of the receipt of such reply;
- ii. If the Secretary-General does not reply to the letter within one month in respect of a staff member stationed in New York, or within two months in respect of a staff member stationed elsewhere, the staff member may appeal against the original administrative decision within one month of the expiration of the time limit specified in this subparagraph for the Secretary-General's reply.

45. As an exception to the rule, the Tribunal notes that in the former system of administration of justice staff rule 111.2 (f) provided that the JAB had the power to waive the time-limit on the ground of 'exceptional circumstances':

"An appeal shall not be receivable unless the time limits specified in paragraph (a) above have been met or have been waived, in exceptional circumstances, by the panel constituted for the appeal."

46. The Tribunal further takes note that the onus to file her appeal within the statutory time limits owing to her remote location from Headquarters. Specifically, she stated that,

“[...] serving at a remote duty station is, as acknowledged by the Redesign Panel, by definition exceptional, insofar as staff members are deprived of equal access to information, communication and process”.

48. Having reviewed her matter, the JAB concluded that it could not find any exceptional circumstances. In its view, the Applicant’s location could not be considered as an “exceptional circumstance” warranting a waiver of time limits within the purview of staff rule 111.2 (f). It explained as follows,

“The Panel agrees that a staff member’s service at remote duty station such as Appellant’s could pose significant challenges to timely filing of an appeal, including access to counsel. However, the lapse of five years between the time the appeal was first submitted to the present deserves particular scrutiny, and specifically seems to require some showing by Appellant that, confronted by those challenges, she was nevertheless attempting to diligently pursue her appeal. ... Even assuming the exceptional circumstances she claims, more than two years passed from the filing by her outside counsel and the email exchange between the Coordinator of the PoC and the JAB Presiding Officer. There is no documentation showing that Appellant herself was diligently following up with her submission, either inquiring as to the status There is no evidence that Appellant herself or through her counsel ever requested an extension of time before the JAB Secretariat. ... The Panel finds no evidence that her counsel was proactively engaged in the case, either with Appellant or with the JAB, at all prior to the JAB Secretariat’s communication in July 2006. The Panel additionally finds no evidence that Appellant was proactive in pursuing the status of her appeal or was seeking to surmount the challenges from her place of residence in any way, either by contacting her counsel or the JAB Secretariat directly.”

Case law on the definition of ‘exceptional circumstances’

49. On this issue, the Tribunal has carefully reviewed the jurisprudence of the former UN Administrative Tribunal, the UNDT and the UN Appeals Tribunal and found that these jurisdictions have generally strictly enforced the time limits requirements. The Tribunal have also consistently defined ‘exceptional circumstances’ as those circumstances beyond the control of the Applicant.

50. The former UN Administrative Tribunal has consistently held that exceptional circumstances are circumstances that must be strictly construed (Judgement No. 1301, (Anonymous) (2006)). More specifically, the former UN Administrative Tribunal provided a definition of exceptional circumstances in its Judgment No. 913, Midaya (1999) as follows:

“[They] must consist of events beyond the Applicant’s control that prevent the Applicant from timely pursuing his or her appeal”.

51. Further, in its judgment No. 1335, (Anonymous) (2007) the former UN Administrative Tribunal reiterated that exceptional circumstances are viewed as serious and beyond the Applicant’s control:

“Generally, though, the Tribunal, which recognizes the importance of complying with procedural rules, finding them to be “of the utmost importance for the well functioning of the Organization” (see Judgement No. 1106, Iqbal (2003)), will not waive or suspend such time limits unless there are extraordinary circumstances, including “serious reasons which prevented the Applicant from acting”. (See Judgement No. 359, Gbikpi (1985).)”

52. The UNDT too has held that time limits must be strictly enforced and endorses the former UN Administrative Tribunal’s interpretation of “exceptional circumstances”. In its judgment Diagne et Al., (UNDT/2009/057), the Tribunal stressed that,

“It adheres to the definition provided by the [former UN Administrative Tribunal] for exceptional circumstances under former staff rules 111.2 (f) as circumstances beyond the control of the Applicant”.

It must be noted that the UN Appeals Tribunal affirmed this ruling in its Judgment No. 2010-UNAT-067.

57. With regards to new evidence, the UNAT held in its judgment Shakir 2010-UNAT-56, that evidence of exceptional circumstances should be presented at the first instance. Specifically, it stated that,

“After a late appeal to the JAB, the Applicant appealed to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal (UNDT), which found her appeal time-barred. She then presented—as a reason why the time limit should be waived—evidence of her lengthy hospitalization. But she presented this evidence for the first time before this court; the UNDT had no opportunity to consider it. All evidence is to be submitted to the UNDT. Under Article 2(5) of the Appeals Tribunal’s Statute, we can, in exceptional circumstances, admit further evidence. But we will not admit evidence which was known to the party and could have, with due diligence, been presented to the UNDT. The UNDT is not a dress rehearsal. We affirm the UNDT’s decision that the case is time-barred.”

58. The Tribunal endorses the above reasoning. It cannot admit evidence which was known to the Applicant and could have been presented to the JAB. Further, the Tribunal does not find any evidence in the file, such as a medical certificate, to support the Applicant’s allegation. On the contrary, the Tribunal finds that, during that same period of alleged illness, the Applicant had sent letters to UNFPA requesting payment of dismissal indemnities. The Tribunal therefore considers that the Applicant has failed to establish that her illness prevented her from filing her appeal before the JAB.

59. As much as the Tribunal sympathizes with the Applicant, it must recall that the strict enforcement of time limits are of utmost importance as stated by the former UN Administrative Tribunal in its Judgment No. 1046, Diaz de Wessely (2002):

“In the Tribunal’s view, it is of the utmost importance that time limits should be respected because they have been established to protect the United Nations administration from tardy, unforeseeable requests that would otherwise hang like the sword of Damocles over the efficient operation of international organizations. Any other approach would endanger the mission of the international organizations, as the Tribunal has pointed out in the past: “Unless such staff rules [on timeliness] are observed by the Tribunal, the Organization will have been deprived of an imperative
