to submit comments on the application. The Dispute Tribunal will decide whether to admit the application for interpretation and, if it does so, shall issue its interpretation.

It is important to point out that an application for interpretation will not stay the timeline for an appeal of the judgment to the Appeals Tribunal. In other words, the time for your filing of an appeal (should you wish to lodge one) begins to run from when you received the judgment.

The Dispute Tribunal cannot alter or revise its findings once judgment has been rendered.

Parties who hold the view that the Dispute Tribunal has erred on its application or findings, on the law or the facts, are best advised to
